MODULE 1: Customer Psychology & The "Change" Framework

1.1 Understanding Buyer Psychology

Tired of posting 30 slides on WhatsApp every day and getting zero orders? Here is how to turn your status into a daily sales machine. The core secret: Customers Don't Buy Clothes; They Buy "The Feeling".

The biggest mistake online stock sellers (fashion, shoes, thrift, bags, and accessories vendors) make is treating their WhatsApp status like a digital warehouse catalogue.

When a customer pays ₦25,000 for an outfit on your status, they are not paying for thread and fabric. They are paying for the feeling: looking confident at a Lagos Owambe, looking professional at a job interview, or receiving compliments from friends.

If you sell wholesale stock to other resellers, they are not buying clothes either—they are buying fast turnover and profit to feed their families. Stop describing stock features ("quality crepe material") and start selling the transformation ("look like 100 million Naira without breaking your bank"). Don't tell them about the price alone, tell them the feeling of the product and how it will make them shine.

As renowned sales authority Zig Ziglar famously stated regarding buyer motivation:

"Stop selling. Start helping. People don't buy for your reasons; they buy for their reasons." — Zig Ziglar

Buyers don't make purchasing decisions based on logic alone; they buy based on emotion, they want absolute proof that your stock is authentic and high quality, They want to be seen as stylish, successful, and smart with their money.

Never post raw pictures of stock with zero context or "DM for price." And Don't Post: "New stock arrival. Available in sizes 8-16. DM for price." Instead, Do Post: "Tired of buying clothes online that look like rags when they arrive? Here is our premium workday stock for ₦18,000 (clear price). Fits true to size, guaranteed to make you look like the boss in every meeting. Only 3 pieces left!"

1.2 Articulating the Gap and Cost of Inaction

What is "The Gap"? The "Gap" is the space between your customer's Current Situation (where they are stuck) and their Desired Situation (where they want to be). As a WhatsApp stock seller (selling clothes, shoes, bags, or wholesale stock), your job is not to dump 30 pictures of new arrivals on your status at once. Your job is to make the customer see how wide this gap is—and position your stock as the only bridge across it.

What is the "Cost of Inaction"? The biggest enemy of a WhatsApp vendor or online vendor is not competitors—it is indecision. Customers love to say "I will get back to you," "Let me think about it," or "I will buy next week."

The Cost of Inaction is the hidden price your customer pays every single day they choose to wait instead of buying right now. If you don't show them what waiting costs them, they will stay inactive.

In his breakthrough sales methodology SPIN Selling, author and researcher Neil Rackham highlights why articulating the cost of inaction is necessary to close sales:

"Buyers don't buy when they understand their problems; they buy when they understand the cost of leaving their problems unsolved. Until the pain of doing nothing outweighs the cost of the solution, the customer will choose to wait." — Neil Rackham.

I will use two scenarios for better understanding:

Scenario A: Selling Retail Stock (e.g., Luxury Dresses)

- ✗ Weak Post: "New stock available in pink and black. ₦22,000. Send DM to order."
- ✓ High-Converting Post: "You have an event this weekend and you're still telling yourself 'I'll buy on Friday.' On Friday, dispatch riders will charge you double for express delivery, or this exact dress in your size will be sold out. Lock in your order today for ₦22,000 and relax knowing your outfit is secured."

Scenario B: Selling Wholesale Stock (e.g., Bale Bags or Thrift Stock Bundles)

-  Weak Post: "Bale of corporate dresses available. ₦85,000. DM to buy."
-  High-Converting Post: "Every day you delay buying this ₦85,000 stock bundle, your competitors are posting these exact dresses and collecting ₦150,000+ from buyers who should be paying YOU. You are losing ₦65,000 in potential profit every week you choose to 'think about it.' Only 2 bales left!"

1.3 Building an Irresistible Offer

Most WhatsApp stock sellers do not have an offer—they only have a product and a price.

If you post a picture of a handbag and write "Handbag available, ₦25,000," you are competing directly with thousands of other vendors selling similar bags. You force the customer to compare you strictly on price, leading to endless price-haggling and lost sales.

An Irresistible Offer changes the game. It is a complete package where you stack the core product with extra value, convenience, guidance, and peace of mind. It transforms your post from "Just another vendor selling bags" to "I would be foolish to pass this up."

In his bestselling book $100M Offers, entrepreneur and offer-creation expert Alex Hormozi explains why a stacked offer beats a standard product pitch:

"Make your offer so good that people feel stupid saying no. Create a higher-value offer by bundling services and products together to increase the perceived value, allowing you to charge more while making the purchase a complete no-brainer for the customer." — Alex Hormozi

A Simple Offer Formula

You can build your offer around:

Product + Desired Outcome + Added Value + Convenience + Reason to Act

1. The Product

What exactly is the customer buying?

Example: Ladies Office Handbag

Be clear about: Size, Colour, Material, What is included, Price

2. The Desired Outcome

Ask: What does the customer really want from this product?

Someone buying a handbag may want: To look professional and classy without carrying an uncomfortable bag.

So instead of only saying: "Quality handbag available."

You could say: "A spacious everyday bag that gives you a clean, professional look without sacrificing space."

You are now selling the change, not just the item.

3. Add More Value

You don't always need to reduce your price.

Sometimes you can make the offer stronger by adding something useful.

For example: Buy the handbag and get a free purse, Buy two perfumes and get discounted delivery or Buy three shirts and get one accessory free.

The additional item should ideally make sense with the main product. Don't add something useless simply because you want to call it a bonus.

4. Make Buying Convenient

Convenience can also increase the attractiveness of an offer.

For example: Same-day dispatch, Nationwide delivery, Multiple payment options, Easy size exchange, Order directly through WhatsApp.

These things reduce the effort required from the customer.

5. Give a Genuine Reason to Act

Sometimes customers like the product but tell themselves: "I will buy it later."

Your offer can include a genuine reason to make a decision now.

For example: Free delivery for the first 20 orders, Offer ends Sunday, Only 5 pieces left in this colour, or Pre-order closes tonight.

But the urgency must be real.

every single day when you actually have 50 pieces, False scarcity can damage trust.

Example: Weak Offer vs Strong Offer

Weak

Black handbag available.

₦20,000

DM to order.

Stronger

Your Everyday Work Bag — ₦20,000

Spacious enough for your phone, wallet, makeup and everyday essentials while still giving you a clean professional look.

- ✓ Available in Black & Brown
- ✓ Nationwide delivery
- ✓ Free purse included today
- ✓ Easy exchange if there's a product defect

Send “BAG” on WhatsApp to order.

The product has not necessarily changed.

The presentation and value of the offer have changed.

Use the Offer on Your WhatsApp Status

Don't simply post the product five times.

Build toward the offer.

For example:

Status 1 — Problem

“Ladies, have you ever carried a beautiful bag that couldn't even fit your everyday essentials?”

Status 2 — Desired Outcome

“You shouldn't have to choose between looking classy and having enough space.”

Status 3 — Product

Show the handbag and demonstrate what fits inside.

Status 4 — Proof

Show a customer review.

Status 5 — Offer

Office Bag — ₦20,000

- ✓ Spacious
- ✓ Available in 2 colours
- ✓ Nationwide delivery
- ✓ Free purse today

Reply “BAG” to order.

Now the offer feels like the natural conclusion of the content rather than a random sales post.

An irresistible offer does not force people to buy. It makes the customer clearly see that what they are receiving feels more valuable than what they are giving up.

Module 1.4: Risk Reversal & Guarantees

The primary barrier preventing an interested prospect from making a purchase is rarely price, it is the fear of making a mistake. Risk reversal shifts the financial and emotional burden of a bad transaction entirely off the buyer and onto the seller, eliminating the “What if I pay and nothing changes?” anxiety that stalls sales.

Don't Just Say “Trust Me”

Many online sellers say: We are legit, 100% trusted vendor, No scam zone.

But saying you are trustworthy is different from showing the customer why buying from you is safe.

Instead, give them clear policies and evidence.

Instead, give them clear policies and evidence.

For example: If you receive the wrong item, we'll replace it at no additional product cost.

or: Wrong size? You can exchange it within 3 days as long as the shoe has not been worn.

Now the customer knows what happens if something goes wrong.

What Can You Guarantee?

Your guarantee should depend on what you sell and what you can realistically control.

1. Delivery Guarantee

If you sell physical products, one of the customer's biggest fears may be: Will I actually receive what I paid for?

You can reduce this fear by showing: Previous delivery confirmations, Tracking information, Clear delivery timelines, Your courier process, Customer unboxing videos

For example: Every order comes with a tracking update once dispatched.

This gives the customer more confidence about what happens after payment.

2. Product-Condition Guarantee

You can promise that the customer will receive the product in the condition advertised.

For example: If your item arrives damaged, send us a video within 24 hours and we'll arrange a replacement. This moves some of the risk away from the customer.

Instead of thinking: If anything goes wrong, I've lost my money, they know there is a clear process for fixing the problem.

3. Size Exchange

For clothes and shoes, one major objection is: What if it doesn't fit?

You can reduce this fear with an exchange policy.

For example: Not your size? Exchange within 3 days as long as the item is unworn and in its original packaging. A customer who was afraid to order because of sizing now has less reason to hesitate.

4. Return or Refund Policy

Where appropriate, you may offer:

Returns

Exchange

Store credit

or

Refunds

under clearly stated conditions.

You don't necessarily need to offer:

“Refund for any reason at any time.”

Your policy should protect both the customer and your business.

Show the Guarantee Before the Customer Asks

Don't hide important policies until after payment.

Mention them in places such as: WhatsApp Status, Product descriptions, WhatsApp catalogue, Pinned posts, Website, Checkout page, Frequently Asked Questions

For example, your Status could say:

Premium Sneakers — ₦25,000

- ✓ Nationwide delivery
- ✓ Tracking provided after dispatch
- ✓ Wrong size? Exchange available
- ✓ Damaged item? Replacement available

Reply “SHOE” to order.

Those few lines can answer objections before the customer even sends a message.

*"Whenever two parties come together to do business, one side is always asking the other to take on all the risk. When you eliminate that risk completely for the customer, your sales will skyrocket because you remove the single biggest obstacle to closing the deal." — Jay Abraham
(Author of Getting Everything You Can Out of All You've Got)*

MODULE 2: WhatsApp Sales Engine (Fixing the "Waist Bead" Status)

Turning your WhatsApp into a high-converting shop that brings sales, not just status views.

2.1 WhatsApp Business Setup & Catalog Creation

If a physical store in Balogun Market has dirty display windows, hidden price tags, and an unapproachable seller, shoppers walk past immediately.

Your WhatsApp Business profile is your digital boutique. If you are using a regular WhatsApp account with a random meme picture, no business hours, and no listed prices, buyers naturally suspect scamming or amateurism. Upgrading to WhatsApp Business immediately establishes credibility, builds trust, and automates your sales process.

Step-by-Step Business Upgrade Process

Step 1: Safe Migration (Zero Data Loss)

- Open your regular WhatsApp > Go to Settings > Chats > Chat Backup > Tap Back Up.
- Download WhatsApp Business from Google Play Store or Apple App Store.
- Open WhatsApp Business, register with your business phone number, and tap Restore when prompted to restore your chat history.

Step 2: Business Profile Optimization

- Profile Picture: Use a high-quality logo or a clear photo of yourself holding your stock. Avoid blurry pictures or motivational quotes.
- Business Name: Use your registered business name or brand (e.g., Luxe Stock Vendor NG).
- Category: Select Clothing (Brand) or Apparel & Accessories.
- Location & Description: State clearly: "Lagos, Nigeria | Nationwide & Worldwide Shipping Available. We deliver high-quality fashion stock."

Step 3: Building Your Catalog (Ending "DM for Price")

Hiding prices creates friction, making serious buyers swipe away to another vendor who lists prices clearly.

- Go to Settings > Business Tools > Catalog > Add New Item.
- Images: Upload 2–3 clear pictures/videos of the item in good lighting.
- Item Name: State the exact product name (e.g., Vintage Silk Corporate Shirts).
- Price: Put the exact price (e.g., ₦12,500).
- Description: State sizes available (e.g., Sizes 8–16), fabric type, and delivery timeline ("Dispatches within 24 hours").

On the power of transparency and reducing buying friction in digital commerce, Harvard Business School marketing professor John T. Gourville notes:

"Friction is the single greatest killer of digital sales. Whenever you force a consumer to take unnecessary mental or operational steps—such as asking for information that should be readily available—conversion rates plummet."* — John T. Gourville

Practical Setup Check: Amateur vs. Professional

Setup Feature	❌ Amateur WhatsApp Profile	✅ Professional WhatsApp Business
Account Type	Regular personal WhatsApp	WhatsApp Business account
Catalog	Empty or unused	Updated weekly with prices, sizes, & descriptions
Price Strategy	"DM for price" in captions	Clear h prices on catalog items & status posts
Bio & Links	Blank or generic quote	Includes shipping policy, location, & catalog link

2.2 The "Save My Number" Auto-Reply System

The Core Secret: Unsaved Contacts Are Wasted Sales

When a new customer messages you from Instagram, TikTok, or Facebook Ads, they usually ask a single question: "Is this dress available?" or "How much?"

If you reply immediately with just the price without getting them to save your contact, two costly things happen:

- 1 They compare your price and disappear without buying.
- 2 They never see your WhatsApp status, meaning you lose the chance to sell new stock arrivals to them in the future.

Your WhatsApp status is your main store display. An unsaved contact will never see your 5:00 PM status posts. Getting them to save your number on day one turns a quick inquiry into a long-term viewer who buys from you repeatedly.

2. Step-by-Step Setup Process

Step 1: Accessing Business Tools

- Open WhatsApp Business.
- Tap Settings (or the 3 dots) > Business Tools.
- Select Greeting Message.

Step 2: Configuring Settings

- Turn ON Send greeting message.
- Tap Recipients and select Everyone not in address book. (This ensures existing customers who are already saved don't get spammed with welcome messages, some sellers make this mistake a lot, so take note).

Step 3: Pasting the Auto-Reply Script

- Tap Greeting message, clear default text, and paste the high-converting script below.

High-Converting Auto-Reply Templates

Template A: For Retail Stock Sellers (Clothes, Shoes, Bags)

"Welcome to [Your Brand Name]!"

We drop new, high-quality stock every week at wholesale prices.

To help you faster and give you access to our Daily Flash Sales & New Arrivals on WhatsApp Status:

1. Save our number as [Your Brand Name].
2. Reply this chat with "SAVED" and your name so we can save yours too!

What item/size are you looking for today?"

Template B: For Wholesale/Reseller Stock Vendors

"Welcome to [Your Brand Name] Wholesale Hub!

We help stock resellers sell out fast with high-turnover thrift/factory bales and bundles.

Before we confirm availability:

1. Save this contact as [Your Brand Name] Wholesale.
2. Reply "SAVED" so you don't miss our weekly restock deals on Status.

Are you looking for retail pieces or wholesale stock bundles?"

How to Handle the "SAVED" Reply

Once the buyer replies "SAVED", instantly click their name, save their phone number, and respond:

"Got it, [Customer Name]! Saved! Let me check stock availability for you right away..."

You have now permanently secured a new viewer for your daily WhatsApp status updates.

2.3 Organizing Leads with Chat Labels

Stop Losing Money in Buried Chats

Imagine running a physical boutique where customers pick clothes, walk up to the cash register, say "Hold this dress, I'm coming back in 10 minutes," and then you throw their outfit into a mountain of random clothes on the floor.

That is exactly what happens when you don't organize your WhatsApp DMs.

When you receive 30+ inquiries a day, chats quickly get buried under new messages. A customer promises to transfer ₦25,000 by 6:00 PM, but by 6:00 PM, their chat has dropped to the bottom of your inbox. You forget to message them, the item gets sold to someone else or the customer moves on, and you lose profit.

WhatsApp Business Labels act as your digital filing cabinet (CRM). In just two taps, you can group leads by their exact buying stage so no sale ever falls through the cracks.

On the power of pipeline organization and systematic follow-up in sales performance, growth expert and author Chet Holmes emphasizes in The Ultimate Sales Machine:

"The majority of sales are lost not because the customer said 'no,' but because the seller lacked the organization and discipline to follow up at the critical moment. Systematizing your pipeline turns chaos into predictable revenue." — Chet Holmes

Step-by-Step Setup & Usage Guide

Step 1: Setting Up Your Labels

- Open WhatsApp Business > Tap Settings (or the 3 dots at the top right).
- Tap Business Tools > Labels.
- Tap any existing label to edit its name, or tap + to create a new custom label.

Step 2: How to Label a Customer (2-Second Habit)

- When chatting with a customer who says "Send account details", press and hold their chat on your inbox screen.
- Tap the Label icon at the top menu.
- Select ● Pending Payment and tap Save.

Step 3: How to Filter and Follow-Up in Seconds

- Go to Business Tools > Labels.
- Tap  Pending Payment.
- WhatsApp instantly displays only the people who promised to pay. You can now follow up with all of them in less than 3 minutes without searching through your entire inbox.

The 5 Color Labels Every Stock Seller Needs

Instead of keeping messy, generic labels, customize your labels to match the journey of a fashion/stock buyer:

2.4 The 5 PM & 7 PM Algorithm Hack Routine

The WhatsApp Algorithm Secret

Many stock sellers make the mistake of dumping 50 pictures of shoes or dresses on their WhatsApp Status at 9:00 AM. The result? Very low views and zero sales. Why? Because at 9:00 AM, your customers are busy at work, in class, or dealing with morning traffic. By the time they finally open their phones in the evening, your posts have been pushed down to the bottom of their status feed by other people's newer updates.

Furthermore, WhatsApp's Status algorithm favors engagement. The more a customer replies to your status, the more WhatsApp pushes your future updates to the very front of their feed and will also increase your views greatly.

To maximize your sales, you need to stop broadcasting and start using the 5 PM & 7 PM Hack Routine.

The Two-Step Routine

This routine relies on human psychology and daily routines. It breaks your selling process into two parts: The Setup (5 PM) and The Knockout (7 PM).

The 5 PM Setup (The Engagement Primer)

At 5:00 PM, people are clocking out of work, sitting in evening traffic, or winding down. They are casually scrolling.

- The Goal: Do not sell anything yet. Your only goal is to make them reply to your status.
- What to Post: Post something interactive.
 - Example 1: A "Sneak Peek" video of you cutting open a new bale of clothes.
 - Example 2: A "This or That" poll (e.g., "Which bag would you rock to a Saturday wedding? A or B? Reply!").
 - Example 3: A relatable meme about shopping or fashion.
- The Algorithm Hack: When 20 people reply to your 5 PM status, the WhatsApp algorithm registers that you have a "close relationship" with them. Your account is instantly flagged as high priority.

The 7 PM Knockout (The Sales Drop)

At 7:00 PM, people are home, relaxed, and have the mental energy to make purchasing decisions and transfer money.

- The Goal: Drop your new stock and close sales.
- What to Post: Now you post your high-quality pictures or videos of the available stock, complete with prices and sizes.
- The Result: Because those customers interacted with you at 5 PM, WhatsApp will automatically place your 7 PM sales drop at the very top of their status list. They see it first, and because they are relaxed at home, they are ready to buy.

Module 3: The Status Attention & Sales Conversion System

3.1 "The Status Attention System:

Crafting opening status hooks that compel qualified viewers to stop, tap, and watch.

Dumping 50 raw stock photos on your WhatsApp status every morning causes customers to mute your account. Crafting a strategic opening hook creates immediate pattern interruption, stopping buyers from swiping away and compelling them to view your entire stock drop.

What Is a Status Hook?

A hook is the first thing you post to capture attention and make people interested enough to continue watching.

For WhatsApp, your hook is usually:

Status 1

The job of Status 1 is not necessarily to sell the product immediately.

Its first job is: Get the right customer to continue to Status 2.

Then Status 2 should make them want Status 3.

And so on.

Think of it like this:

Status 1 → Stop

Status 2 → Interest

Status 3 → Desire

Status 4 → Trust

Status 5 → Offer

Status 6 → Action

Don't Start With the Product

Imagine you sell handbags.

Weak Opening

Black handbag available — ₦20,000.

The customer immediately knows everything: Product, Price, Nothing is making them curious, They can tap away.

Instead, you could begin with: Ladies, if your handbag looks beautiful but can't even carry your everyday essentials, read this.

Now the person who has experienced that problem has a reason to continue, you haven't even shown the product yet, but you have gained attention.

4 Simple Types of WhatsApp Status Hooks

You don't need complicated copywriting. You can build most of your opening hooks around these four ideas.

1. Problem Hook

Start with something your customer is struggling with.

For example:

Shoes: Do your sneakers still start looking old after only a few wears?

Perfume: If your perfume disappears before you even leave the house, this is for you.

Bags: Ladies, are you tired of beautiful bags that have no space?

Clothes: Ever bought an outfit online and it looked completely different when it arrived?

The right customer recognizes the problem immediately.

2. Desired-Outcome Hook

Instead of talking about the problem, start with what the customer wants.

For example:

Perfume: Imagine smelling good from morning until you get home at night.

Fashion: You don't need an expensive wardrobe to look put together.

Hair: You can get that expensive wig look without spending ₦300k.

Now the customer wants to know: How? That keeps them watching.

3. Curiosity Hook

Give the viewer enough information to become interested, but don't reveal everything immediately.

For example: There is one mistake many ladies make when buying perfumes online.

or: Before you buy your next pair of sneakers, check this.

or: This is why your expensive handbag may still look cheap.

Don't give the answer immediately. Let the next Status continue the story.

4. Question Hook

Ask a question your ideal customer can immediately relate to.

For example: How much did you spend on the last shoe you stopped wearing after two months?

or: Ladies, what is the first thing you check before buying a wig?

or: Would you pay ₦25,000 for a perfume if it actually lasted all day?"

Questions work because they encourage the customer to mentally respond.

They are no longer just watching.

They are participating.

The Hook Must Lead Somewhere

A hook should not become clickbait.

If you start with: You won't believe what happened!

and the next Status is simply: Buy my bag for ₦20,000."

people may feel tricked. Also avoid overused hooks such as, Stop scrolling! Breaking news! You won't believe this!

3.2 The What-To-Post Sales Map

Turning Random Product Updates Into Structured, High-Converting Story Arcs That Build Desire.

Posting dozens of unorganized product pictures to your WhatsApp status creates decision fatigue and causes viewers to skip your updates. A structured sales map replaces random uploads with a deliberate, multi-slide story arc designed to lead a viewer psychologically from initial curiosity to intense desire and immediate action.

One of the biggest mistakes WhatsApp vendors make is posting products randomly.

Your Status may look like:

Shoe — ₦25,000

Bag — ₦18,000

Perfume — ₦15,000

Another shoe — ₦30,000

Available. DM to order.

There is nothing necessarily wrong with showing your products, but when every Status is simply product + price, the customer has very little reason to keep watching.

Stop Posting Like a Catalogue

Imagine you walk into a physical shoe store and the salesperson immediately begins shouting prices:

“₦25,000!”

“₦30,000!”

“₦20,000!”

without first understanding what you want, that would feel strange. But this is exactly how many vendors use WhatsApp Status.

Every Status says:

Available

Available.

Available.

Instead, think of your Status as a short story that gradually gives someone a reason to want your product.

The What-To-Post Sales Map

A simple sales sequence can contain six stages:

Status 1 — HOOK

The first Status gets attention, don't start by showing the product. Start with something your ideal customer cares about.

For example, if you sell sneakers: Before you buy your next everyday sneaker, check this.

Or: If your sneakers normally start opening at the sole after a few weeks, this is for you.

The goal is simple: Get the right person to keep watching.

Status 2 — PROBLEM OR DESIRE

Now develop the reason they should care.

For example: Most people choose sneakers based only on how they look, but if you're wearing them regularly, comfort and durability matter just as much.

You are educating the customer while making the problem more important.

Or you can focus on desire: Imagine having one sneaker you can wear with jeans, chinos and even your casual office outfits.

Now the customer begins imagining the result.

Status 3 — PRODUCT/SOLUTION

Now introduce your product.

For example: That's why we brought in this everyday sneaker.

Then show:

- Different angles
- Material
- Sole
- Inside
- Someone wearing it

Explain how the product connects to what you talked about earlier.

Instead of simply saying: Quality sneaker.

say: It has a cushioned inside for everyday comfort and a simple design that works with different outfits.

Now the product feels like a solution, not a random item you are trying to sell.

Status 4 — PROOF

Before asking customers for money, reduce their doubt.

Show:

Customer review

Delivery confirmation

Customer wearing the product

Unboxing video

Repeat customer

For example: This was what one of our customers said after receiving hers 🙌, then post the testimonial.

Status 5 — OFFER

Now present the complete offer.

For example:

Premium Everyday Sneakers

₦25,000

- ✓ Available in Black & White
- ✓ Sizes 39–45
- ✓ Nationwide Delivery
- ✓ Size exchange available
- ✓ Same-day dispatch for orders before 2 PM

Now the customer knows exactly what they are getting.

This is much stronger than simply posting:

“Sneaker available ₦25k.”

Status 6 — CALL TO ACTION

Finally, tell the customer exactly what to do.

For example: Want one? Reply ‘SNEAKER’ and I’ll send you the available colours and sizes.

Or: Click the link below to order.

Or: Send me your size if you want me to reserve one for you.

Don't assume people automatically know what to do next.

Make the next step obvious.

Your Status Should Create Desire Before Asking for Money. You Don't Need to Use All Six Every Time, the goal is not to turn every product into twenty Status updates. the important thing is that the posts connect.

"People don't buy goods and services. They buy relations, stories, and magic. When you replace standalone product features with a structured story arc, you stop trying to convince people to buy and start giving them a reason to care." — Bernadette Jiwa (Author of Difference: The One-Page Method for Reimagining Your Business)

3.3 The Views-To-Conversation Method

Moving Silent Status Watchers Into Active DM Inquiries And Purchasing Discussions.

Having many WhatsApp Status views does not automatically mean you will make sales.

Someone can watch your Status every day without ever sending you a message.

This is because viewing is passive, while buying normally requires the customer to take another step: View → Reply → Conversation → Buying Decision → Purchase

Your job is therefore not only to get people to watch your Status. You should also give interested viewers an easy reason to start a conversation with you.

For a WhatsApp vendor, the goal is to turn some of those silent viewers into people who raise their hands and say:

"How much is this?"

"Do you have black?"

"Is size 42 available?"

"How do I order?"

That is where the sales conversation begins.

Don't Always End With "DM to Order"

Many vendors finish every Status with: DM to order.

There is nothing wrong with this, but it sometimes asks the customer to make too big a jump.

The person may be interested but not yet ready to say: I want to buy.

Instead, make the first action smaller and easier.

For example:

Instead of:

“DM to order.”

Try: Reply ‘BLACK’ if you want to see the black colour.

or: Reply ‘SIZE’ and I’ll send you the available sizes.

or: Which would you choose — Black or Brown?

Now the customer doesn't feel like replying means they have already committed to buying.

They are simply starting a conversation.

Use Conversation Triggers

A conversation trigger is something in your Status that gives the viewer a simple reason to reply.

Buffer recommends creating content that invites participation and making it easy for people to respond.

For a WhatsApp seller, there are several simple ways to do this.

For a WhatsApp seller, there are several simple ways to do this.

1. Ask an Easy Question

Don't ask complicated questions that require long answers.

Ask something the customer can answer immediately.

For example, if you sell bags: Which one would you carry — Black or Brown?

If you sell perfumes: Do you prefer sweet or strong fragrances?

If you sell shoes: White or Black?

If you sell clothes: Would you wear this to work or for an outing?

The purpose is to get the customer to participate.

Once they respond, you now have a natural conversation.

2. Use Keyword Replies

Instead of asking customers to type a full message, give them one simple word to send.

For example:

“Reply ‘BAG’ to see the available colours.”

“Reply ‘PRICE’ for today's offer.”

“Reply ‘PERFUME’ and I'll recommend one based on your budget.”

“Reply ‘SIZE’ to check if yours is available.”

This reduces the effort required to start the conversation.

3. Use Curiosity to Open the DM

You don't have to put every piece of information on the Status.

Sometimes you can intentionally leave something for the customer to ask about.

For example:

Status: We have this in three colours, but one colour has been selling faster than the others.

Then: Reply ‘COLOUR’ and I'll show you all three.

Now interested customers have a reason to message you.

However, don't hide basic information simply to frustrate people.

The goal is to create curiosity, not make buying unnecessarily difficult.

4. Offer Simple Help

Another strong conversation starter is to offer assistance rather than immediately asking for a sale.

For example:

Perfume Vendor: Not sure which perfume fits you? Tell me whether you prefer sweet, woody or fresh scents and I'll recommend one.”

Fashion Vendor: Not sure what size to order? Send me your measurements and I'll help you choose."

Skincare Vendor: Not sure which one is right for you? Tell me what you're looking for and I'll show you the available options."

The conversation starts around help, not pressure. That can make it easier for the customer to engage.

Module 4: DM Closing, High-Converting Vocabulary & Follow-Up

4.1 Quick Replies Setup

Slow response times kill sales in conversational messaging. WhatsApp Business Quick Replies allow you to save and reuse frequently sent messages using forward-slash shortcuts (such as /price, /delivery, or /pay), reducing response times from minutes to seconds while ensuring every lead receives a tested, high-converting script.

When someone sees your WhatsApp Status and sends:

"How much?"

"Do you deliver?"

"Is size 42 available?"

"How do I pay?"

you should not have to type the same answer from scratch every single time.

This is where WhatsApp Business Quick Replies become useful. Quick Replies allow you to save messages you use regularly and bring them into a conversation when needed.

For an online vendor, this can help you respond faster, more consistently, and more professionally, especially when several customers are messaging you at the same time.\

The goal, however, is not to turn yourself into a robot.

Your Quick Replies should give you a strong starting point, then you personalize the message based on the customer and conversation.

Why Response Speed Matters

Imagine someone watches your Status, likes a shoe and immediately sends:

“Do you have size 43?”

At that moment, their interest is high.

If you reply several hours later, they may:

- Forget about the product
- Buy from another vendor
- Spend the money elsewhere
- Lose interest

You may not always be able to respond in five minutes, but Quick Replies can help reduce unnecessary delays.

What Should You Save as Quick Replies?

Start with questions customers ask repeatedly.

For most online vendors, these include:

Price

Availability

Delivery

Payment

Sizes

Colours

How to Order

Location

Exchange Policy

Follow-Up

Instead of rewriting these responses dozens of times every day, create a response bank.

Example 1: Price Quick Reply

Avoid replying with only: “N25k.”

The customer asked for the price, but you can use the opportunity to keep the conversation moving.

Saved Reply: “It's N25,000. We currently have Black and White available. Which colour would you prefer?”

This does three things: Answers the question, Provides useful information, and Asks a question that continues the conversation

The goal is not simply to answer. The goal is to answer and move the customer one step forward.

Example 2: Delivery Quick Reply

Customer: “Do you deliver outside Lagos?”

Instead of typing a long explanation every time, save: “Yes, we deliver nationwide. Delivery time and cost depend on your location. What state are you in so I can confirm it for you?”

Notice that the reply ends with: “What state are you in?”

You are keeping the conversation moving toward the purchase.

Example 3: Availability Quick Reply

Customer: “Is this still available?”

Saved response: “Yes, it's currently available . Which colour and size would you like me to check for you?”

Instead of: “Yes.”

You turn the answer into another buying question.

Example 4: Payment Quick Reply

Once the customer has decided to buy, you can save your payment instructions.

For example: “Perfect. To confirm your order, please make payment to the account below:

Bank: [Bank Name]

Account Number: [Number]

Account Name: [Business Name]

Please send your payment receipt after payment so I can confirm your order.”

Make sure your actual business details are correct before saving this reply.

Example 5: Order Information Quick Reply

You may repeatedly ask customers for the same information.

Instead, save something like: “To process your order, please send:

Name:

Phone Number:

Delivery Address:

Product/Colour:

Size, if applicable:”

This prevents forgetting important details.

Example 6: Size Quick Reply

If you sell shoes or clothes: “Yes, we have different sizes available. Send me the size you normally wear and I'll check what's currently available for you.”

This is better than sending a giant list of sizes before knowing what the customer needs.

Example 7: Exchange Policy Quick Reply

Customers may ask: “What if the shoe doesn't fit?”

Save: If the size doesn't fit, you can request an exchange within 3 days, provided the item is unworn and still in its original condition. Delivery charges for the exchange may apply.

Your exact policy should reflect what your business can genuinely offer.

4.2 Handling DM Objections & Price Complaints

When a prospect asks "How much?", says "It's too expensive", or drops "I'll get back to you", weak sellers make one of two mistakes: they dump a raw price tag and wait, or panic and offer immediate discounts. High-converting closers view objections not as rejections, but as requests for more information and clarity around value.

When a customer asks for the price or raises an objection, it does not automatically mean they are rejecting your product. They may simply need more information before they feel comfortable buying.

So when someone says: "It's too expensive."

Don't become defensive.

Don't immediately reduce the price.

And don't start begging them to buy.

Instead, try to understand what is really stopping the customer from moving forward.

A useful process is: Listen → Understand → Clarify → Respond → Move the conversation forward.

1. When the Customer Says: "How Much?"

This is one of the most common messages WhatsApp vendors receive.

A common mistake is replying with only: "N25,000." You have answered the question, but you have not helped the conversation move anywhere. Instead, give the price clearly and add one useful piece of information.

Example

Customer: "How much?"

Instead of: "25k."

Try: "It's N25,000. We currently have Black and Brown available. Which colour do you prefer?"

2. When the Customer Says: "It's Too Expensive"

Don't immediately respond: "But it's quality!"

or: "That's our last price."

or: "How much do you want to pay?"

First understand what they mean.

You can respond: “I understand. Is it above the budget you had in mind, or are you comparing it with another option?”

Their answer tells you what to do next.

3. If the Customer Genuinely Cannot Afford It

Not every objection needs to be “overcome.”

Sometimes the person genuinely doesn't have enough money.

If you have a cheaper option, recommend it.

For example: “No problem. If ₦30,000 is above your budget, I have another option at ₦22,000 with a similar style. Would you like me to show you?”

This is much better than: “How much do you have?”

or: “Please add money.”

If you don't have a cheaper option, you don't need to force the sale.

4. When the Customer Says: “I’ll Get Back to You”

This can mean many things.

They may be:

- Comparing other vendors
- Waiting for money
- Unsure about the product
- Worried about delivery
- Not completely convinced
- Politely trying to leave the conversation

Don't immediately reply: “Okay.”

But don't pressure them either.

Try gently discovering what is holding them back.

Example

Customer: "I'll get back to you."

You: "No problem. Before you go, is there anything you're still unsure about—maybe the size, delivery or the product itself?"

Now they may tell you the real objection.

For example: "I'm just worried that the shoe might not fit."

Great. Now you can explain your size-exchange policy.

The problem was not necessarily that they needed more time. The problem was risk.

The goal is to make the customer comfortable enough to tell you their real concern.

5. Don't Argue With the Customer

If someone says: "It's expensive."

Don't reply: "No, it's not expensive."

For them, it may genuinely feel expensive.

Arguing about their opinion can turn a buying conversation into a fight.

Instead: Acknowledge → Ask → Explain

For example: "I understand. What price range were you expecting?"

Then listen.

You may discover they expected: ₦20,000

while yours is: ₦22,000

That is a completely different situation from someone with only: ₦8,000.

A Simple Objection Formula

Whenever you receive an objection, remember:

1. ACKNOWLEDGE

"I understand."

2. CLARIFY

“Is it mainly the price, or is there something else you're unsure about?”

3. RESPOND

Address the actual concern.

4. MOVE FORWARD

“Would you like me to show you the available colours?”

4.4 The Non-Desperate Closing & Follow-Up System

A customer can ask for the price, choose a colour, ask about delivery and still suddenly disappear. This happens all the time in online selling.

Someone may say: “I’ll make payment shortly.” Then nothing.

Or: “I really like the black one.” Then they stop replying.

Your first instinct may be to keep messaging:

“Hello?”

“Are you still interested?”

“Please patronize me.”

“Should I send account number?”

But repeatedly chasing the customer can make you appear desperate and can reduce the confidence they have in your business. The goal of follow-up is therefore not to beg someone to buy. It is to reopen the conversation professionally and give the customer another reason to make a decision.

Silence Does Not Always Mean “No”

Customers disappear for different reasons.

They may have:

- Become busy
- Forgotten to reply
- Been comparing other vendors

- Needed more money
- Become unsure about delivery
- Had another objection they didn't mention
- Decided to postpone the purchase

So don't immediately assume: “They don't want it.”

At the same time, don't assume: “If I message them ten times, they will eventually buy.”

Good follow-up sits between those two extremes.

Pipedrive notes that carefully worded follow-ups can help restart communication with prospects who have stopped responding.

Don't Follow Up With “Are You Still Interested?”

This is probably one of the most common follow-up messages: “Hello ma, are you still interested?”

The problem is that it gives the customer an easy answer: “No.”

or: “I'll let you know.”

And the conversation ends again.

Instead, return with something useful or specific.

For example:

Weak Follow-Up: “Are you still interested in the bag?”

Better: “Hi Ada, the black bag you asked about is still available. I also took a closer video of the inside in case you wanted to see how spacious it is.”

Now you have given the customer a reason to reopen the conversation.

Follow Up Based on Where the Conversation Stopped

Your follow-up should depend on the customer's last concern.

If They Asked About Price

Customer: “How much?”

You: “~~₦~~25,000.” Then silence.

Don't follow up with: “Hello?”

Try: “Hi, just to add—the ₦25,000 includes the bag and purse, and we currently have Black and Brown available. Which one did you prefer?”

You are giving more context instead of simply chasing.

If They Were Worried About Delivery

Follow up with useful information.

For example: “Hi, I checked delivery to Ibadan. It's ₦3,000 and usually takes 1–2 working days. Thought I'd send that so you have the full cost.”

You have removed one possible reason for the delay.

Use the “New Information” Follow-Up

One of the strongest follow-ups gives the customer something they didn't have before.

This could be:

A new product video

A customer review

Delivery information

A new colour

A restock notification

A relevant promotion

An answer to an objection

For example: “You asked about the brown one yesterday. One of our customers just received hers, so I thought I'd send you the picture to see what the colour looks like in natural light.”

This doesn't feel like: “Please buy from me.” It feels helpful.

Don't Make the Customer Feel Guilty

Avoid messages such as:

“I've messaged you several times and you're not replying.”

“You said you would pay yesterday.”

“Why did you stop responding?”

These messages can make the customer uncomfortable.

Instead, simply restart naturally.

For example: “Hi Tolu, the white sneaker you liked is still available in size 41. Let me know if you'd like me to hold one for you.”

No accusation. No drama.

5.1 The WhatsApp sales Diagnostic

Find the Exact Weak Link Between Audience, Attention, Views, Trust, Desire, Closing and Follow-Up

A WhatsApp sales engine functions like a continuous chain, it is only as strong as its weakest link. Identifying whether your sales breakdown occurs at audience reach, status attention, offer desire, or DM closing prevents you from wasting effort fixing parts of your funnel that are already working.

When sales are low, don't immediately assume: "My product is bad." Or, "WhatsApp is not working."

Your sales process is like a chain. If one part is weak, customers may stop moving toward the purchase.

The goal of the WhatsApp Sales Diagnostic is to identify where customers are dropping off, so you fix the correct problem instead of changing everything.

The 7-Point WhatsApp Sales Chain

1. Audience Problem

Ask: Are the right people even seeing my Status?

If you sell women's fashion but most of your contacts have little interest in fashion, the problem may be your audience.

Weak audience = people see the product but don't need it.

Focus on attracting contacts who have the financial capacity and genuine need for your product.

2. Attention Problem

Maybe you have the right audience, but people are not paying attention.

Check your opening Status.

If you always begin with: "Available — ₦25,000."

people may simply tap past it.

Improve your: Hooks, curiosity, problems and desired outcomes. (find it in previous modules)

3. Views Problem

If only a small number of contacts regularly see your Status, your problem may simply be visibility.

Check:

- Are people saving your number?
- Are you posting consistently?
- Are you posting when your audience is active?
- Are people getting tired of repetitive content?

Fix the visibility problem before worrying about closing.

4. Trust Problem

You may get views and enquiries but very few payments.

Customers may be thinking: “Can I trust this person with my money?”

Increase trust with:

- Customer reviews
- Delivery proof
- Product videos
- Clear business information
- Exchange policies
- Genuine testimonials

If customers want the product but fear paying you, the problem is trust, not necessarily price.

5. Desire Problem

Customers may trust you but still not strongly want the product.

If all you post is: Product + Price

you may not be showing why the product matters.

Talk about: The problem it solves, the result it provides and how the customer will feel or benefit after buying it.

6. Closing Problem

If people regularly ask:

“How much?”

“Is it available?”

but rarely buy, examine your DM conversations.

You may be:

- Giving one-word answers
- Failing to explain value
- Not asking useful questions
- Becoming defensive about price
- Not guiding the customer toward the next step

Your problem may not be getting leads.

It may be turning conversations into sales.

7. Follow-Up Problem

Some customers are interested but don't buy immediately.

If you never follow up, you may be losing people who simply became busy, forgot or needed more information.

Follow up professionally with:

New information + Useful value + Easy next step

instead of repeatedly asking: “Are you still interested?”

Simple Action Step

Look at your last 7–14 days of WhatsApp activity.

Ask:

Are enough of the right people seeing me?

Are they watching?

Are they replying?

Are they asking about the product?

Are they paying?

Am I following up with interested people?

Find the stage where the biggest drop happens.

That is the stage you should work on first.

Remember

Don't fix what isn't broken. Find the weakest stage in your WhatsApp sales process, fix it, then measure what improves.

5: The Implementation Checklist

Turn Every Lesson Into Actions You Can Complete, Review and Improve Inside Your Own Business

Knowledge without execution creates zero revenue. The Implementation Checklist bridges the gap between learning WhatsApp sales strategies and embedding them into a repeatable daily routine, turning abstract concepts into actionable steps you can complete, audit, and improve inside your own business.

You may understand buyer psychology, WhatsApp Status hooks, offers, closing and follow-up, but nothing changes in your business until you actually use what you have learned.

Turn Lessons Into Tasks

Don't write:

“Improve my WhatsApp.”

That is too vague.

Instead, turn it into specific actions:

- Update your WhatsApp Business profile.
- Create 5 Quick Replies.
- Write 3 opening Status hooks.
- Collect 5 customer reviews.
- Create one complete Hook → Proof → Offer → CTA Status sequence.
- Follow up with 5 interested customers who went silent.

Use the Simple Implementation Cycle

For every strategy in this guide, follow:

Learn → Implement → Measure → Improve

1. Learn

Understand the lesson.

2. Implement

Use it inside your own WhatsApp business.

3. Measure

Check what happened.

For example:

Did Status views increase?

Did more people reply?

Did more conversations become sales?

4. Improve

Keep what worked and change what didn't.

Atlassian's Plan-Do-Check-Act approach follows the same principle: implement a plan, check the results, act on what you learn, and repeat the process.

Review Your Progress Weekly

At the end of each week, ask:

What did I implement?

What worked?

What didn't work?

What should I change next week?

You do not need to change everything at once.

Atlassian recommends focusing on fewer action items because fewer actions are more likely to actually get completed.

Start with the weakest part of your WhatsApp sales process and improve it before moving to the next.

Remember

The goal of this guide is not to know more about WhatsApp selling. The goal is to make measurable improvements in the way you attract, engage, convince and close customers.

Appendix

Here are 20 common follow-up mistakes WhatsApp vendors make and better ways to handle them.

#	❌ Follow-Up Mistake	✅ Better Correction
1	"Are you still interested?"	"Hi, the black bag you asked about is still available. Would you like me to send you a closer video?"
2	"Hello??"	"Hi Ada, just checking in about the sneaker you asked about yesterday. Size 42 is still available."
3	"Why are you not replying?"	"No worries if you've been busy. Let me know if there's anything about the product you'd like me to clarify."
4	"You said you would pay yesterday."	"Hi, just checking whether you still want me to reserve the item for you."
5	"Please patronize me."	"The item is still available if you'd like to complete your order."
6	"I really need your support."	"If this option works for you, I can help you complete the order."
7	Sending the same message repeatedly	Return with new information such as a review, video, delivery update or available colour.
8	Following up without remembering what the customer wanted	Mention the exact product: "The brown size 40 shoe you asked about..."
9	Immediately reducing the price	First ask: "Is the price the main concern, or is there something else you're still considering?"
10	"How much do you have?"	"What budget range are you working with? I can show you another suitable option."
11	"Last price is ₦25k."	"It's ₦25,000, and that includes [relevant benefit]. Would you like me to show you what comes with it?"
12	Creating fake urgency: "Only one left!" when it isn't true	Use genuine urgency: "We currently have two pieces in size 42."

13	Messaging the customer five times in one day	Give the customer reasonable space before following up again.
14	Sending only “Good morning” and waiting	Give context: “Good morning. The perfume you asked about yesterday is still available.”
15	Asking “So are you buying or not?”	“Is there anything you're still unsure about before deciding?”
16	Getting angry when the customer says another vendor is cheaper	“I understand. Prices can differ. Ours includes [quality/benefit/policy]. I can send you a closer video so you can compare.”
17	Following up without adding value	Send useful information: “A customer just sent feedback on the same product you asked about. I thought you'd like to see it.”
18	Continuing to message after the customer clearly says no	Respect the decision: “No problem at all. Feel free to reach out whenever you need anything.”
19	Forgetting interested customers completely	Use WhatsApp Business labels such as Hot Lead, Follow Up, Customer, Repeat Customer.
20	Treating every silent customer as a lost sale	Re-engage professionally: “The product you asked about has just been restocked. Let me know if you'd like me to check your preferred colour.”

Better Rule

Instead of making a customer feel:

"I'm a bad person if I don't buy."

make them feel:

"I understand the value, I know what happens next, and I don't want to miss the opportunity if this is right for me."

Use:

Reminder + New Value + Genuine Urgency + Easy Next Step

That creates buying pressure without damaging trust.
